

....Current decision-analyses of climate thresholds are potentially based on overconfident parameter estimates.

The typical result of generally decreasing uncertainty over time.

Statistical analysis using a single model structure.

Contrasted with the observed development of historical estimates.

Observed development, based on literature review.